

ABSTRACT

In a method for the haulage of subsurface-mined material with at least one vehicle featuring a travel drive, at least two vehicles are used in the roadway section between the heading face and a continuously extended haulage device, wherein at least one material transfer from one vehicle to another vehicle takes place between the heading face and the transfer of the material to the haulage device.